Railwayman's house with side building

The Saxon railwayman's class III house can be portrayed by plastering the gable wall or cladding it with slate. There wasn't much living space for the railwayman's family. The side building contained the duty room and a storage room. A signal bell as well as ladders, tools and bicycles are included.

11 455 H0 Detached house

Suburban and rural areas often have many half-timbered houses. You can now recreate this with item 11 453. Includes exterior lights, round timber snow guards, solar panels, satellite system and flowerpots with colourful foam, so you can create a very realistic-looking scene. We recommend combining with item 41 648 – privacy fence with posts, item 41 649 – waste bins with accessories, and item 41 650 – patio accessories.

11 458 H0
Converter station
with interior fittings

This is another basic model from our modular system range. One of the special features is the straight window lintels. Corners and floor panels are included to give stability. The large windows allow you to see inside. An additional special feature is the decorative elements made of card that can be used to create the inner walls. Additional signs such as "No Smoking", etc. make it look even more realistic. But what really catches the eye is the raised level with a converter and four cabinets, accessed by steps.

The railings are made from sturdy laser-cut card. The four-panel folding gate can be moved and opened. Lights also included. To create a complete scene we recommend item 11 459 – control centre for converter station, and item 41 652 – transformers and accessories.

Interior walls made from card

The large industrial windows allow you to see into the workshops. That is why you shouldn't just "put it together", but also craft it with interior walls made from card. The plaster gives it an aged look. Decorative elements with signs, beacons, etc. are also included.

The kit contains 96 interior walls and columns, as well as card strips to compensate for the extra height between the walls and window frames.
